

Natural Disasters

Michael: Sarah, isn't your mom from Germany? Does she still have relatives there? As of today, I heard there are 155 people still missing a week after their record rainfall.

Sarah: Thanks for asking, Michael. Luckily, our relatives don't live in western Germany, which is where the flood is. On the other side of the world, Henan province in China is suffering from a very bad flood too. Then we also have the fires in the west.

Michael: So sad! In Oregon a wildfire burned through more than 364,000 acres. Over 2000 people had to abandon their homes.

Sarah: The consequences of climate change seem worse than we thought. I agree it's very sad. By the way, I'm planning to attend a Zoom seminar on the topic of climate change.

Michael: Oh, that's great. Can you pass me the info too?

Sarah: Sure, I'll send you the link when I get home.
